

Finding value in the unpopular: Chris Mittleman's differentiated global equities strategy receives a warm welcome.

Investor roadshow wrap-up.

Wrapping up a week of meetings with contrarian value investor Chris Mittleman, CIO and Managing Partner, Mittleman Investment Management, LLC ("MIM") we reflect on some of the key characteristics of Chris' investment strategy that were found to be most differentiated and appealing at this point in the market cycle. With holdings in the portfolio trading at the largest discount to Chris' appraisal of fair value in nearly a decade, the strategy appealed to many investors who believe mainstream equity valuations are at extremes.

Reiterating a quote that inspired him early on in his career: 'Have opinions at extremes, and wait for extreme moments' (Joe Rosenberg, Loews Corp), Chris compared the current environment to the late 1990s when the market was full of popular stocks trading at high valuations. Clients who became the foundation of MIM experienced positive returns from 1997 through 1999, but significantly underperformed the popular indices, only to be followed by a 3-year period (2000 through 2002) where the S&P 500 dropped nearly 40%, the NASDAQ about 65%, and Chris' clients were up about 20% cumulatively (unaudited and not part of the MIM Composite track record).

Introduction

The Mittleman Global Value Equity Fund invests in a concentrated portfolio of long-term investments across the globe. Unconstrained by capitalisation, sector or geography the fund invests wherever the best risk/reward trade-offs are available. Chris Mittleman has used the same strategy since the early 1990s to invest in global markets. Chris' positioning is often at odds with consensus viewpoints, especially during periods of irrational and emotional extremes. MIM's client base spans university endowments, foundations, pension plans, family offices and high net worth individuals.

Differentiating characteristics

Several key characteristics distinguish MIM and the Mittleman Global Value Equity Fund ("MGVEF"):

1. Performance¹: MIM's strategy has produced exceptional performance consistent with Chris Mittleman's investment philosophy for over 25 years². Compounding at 15.6% pa through 30 September 2018 since inception, MIM's Composite performance is ranked in the top 1% of global equity accounts in the PSN Manager Database over the past ten years and since inception³.
2. FUM: MIM managed US$457m as of 30 September 2018, which is comparatively low vs peers with similar track records. Chris outlined that client 'selection' (i.e. finding investors who are aligned with his strategy and have the patience to endure the volatility that it experiences) has been as important to his long-term success as stock picking. During the past 4 plus years of relative underperformance (including 2014), MIM has seen net inflows which is a testament to his clients' alignment.
3. Client retention: MIM has an average annual client retention rate⁴ of approximately 96% since its inception.

2. Chris Mittleman began investing accounts aligned with his strategy in 1993. MIM was founded in 2005. The Mittleman Investment Management Composite inception is 31 December 2002.

3. PSN Manager Database, September 2018.

4. Client retention rate is the historical annual average beginning on 31 December 2002; it is calculated based on each year's beginning assets under management ("AUM") less outflows attributable to closed accounts for such year over total Firm beginning AUM for each such year.

RESEARCH NOTE

4. Calibre of Chris Mittleman's decision-making: The pillars of MIM's investment policy are autonomous thought, discipline, knowledge, patience, focus, and hard work. Chris Mittleman has accrued knowledge and wisdom from over 25 successful years in the industry, evident in his proven ability to deal with short-term adversity. Of the 93 stocks Chris' clients have held since the inception of the MIM Composite's track record, he has achieved a 70% hit rate⁵.
5. Differentiated holdings: MIM's holdings are rarely found in other global equity portfolios and are absent from the top 10 holdings of index funds. It typically invests in unpopular or under-followed companies before the institutional herd arrives. Thus, MIM, with its autonomy of thought, can introduce a new set of risks (and thus drivers of return) to an aggregate global equity portfolio.
6. Private equity characteristics: MIM analyses individual stocks as if it is purchasing the entire company, focusing on its cash-on-cash return. Quite often this private equity-like assessment of value results in portfolio holdings being targeted for buyouts which then attract a premium price to market value. Like private equity, the firm also believes that a business that can tolerate leverage should, in most cases have some leverage to optimise its capital structure.
7. Lack of constraints: Unlike most global equity investors, MIM is unconstrained by capitalisation, geography or sector; it invests wherever there is the greatest disparity between fair value and price. A modest but not insignificant amount of capital affords Mittleman increased flexibility to build wealth for investors.
8. Definition of risk and margin of safety: Rather than focussing on beta⁶ and portfolio volatility, MIM defines risk as the probability of long-term capital loss. MIM views volatility as an opportunity. It mitigates risk by enforcing a sufficiently high margin of safety in its acquisition price, through its preference for recession-proof or recession-resistant businesses with stable earnings and through its acknowledgment of discipline, patience, knowledge and focus as timeless elements of long-term success.

5. The number of stocks held that have made money divided by the total number of stocks held.
